ALPACOS

WHAT IS ALPACA?

Alpacas (lama pacos) are members of South American camelid family.

They are bred at altitudes from 2,500 to over 4,500 meters above sea level, where have to withstand temperatures that fluctuate between +30 C to -20 C in a single day and survive on a special low – protein diet based on natural grasses found on the moorlands.

ALPACOS

Despite of their thermal properties, alpacas are gentle, inquisitive and social animals.

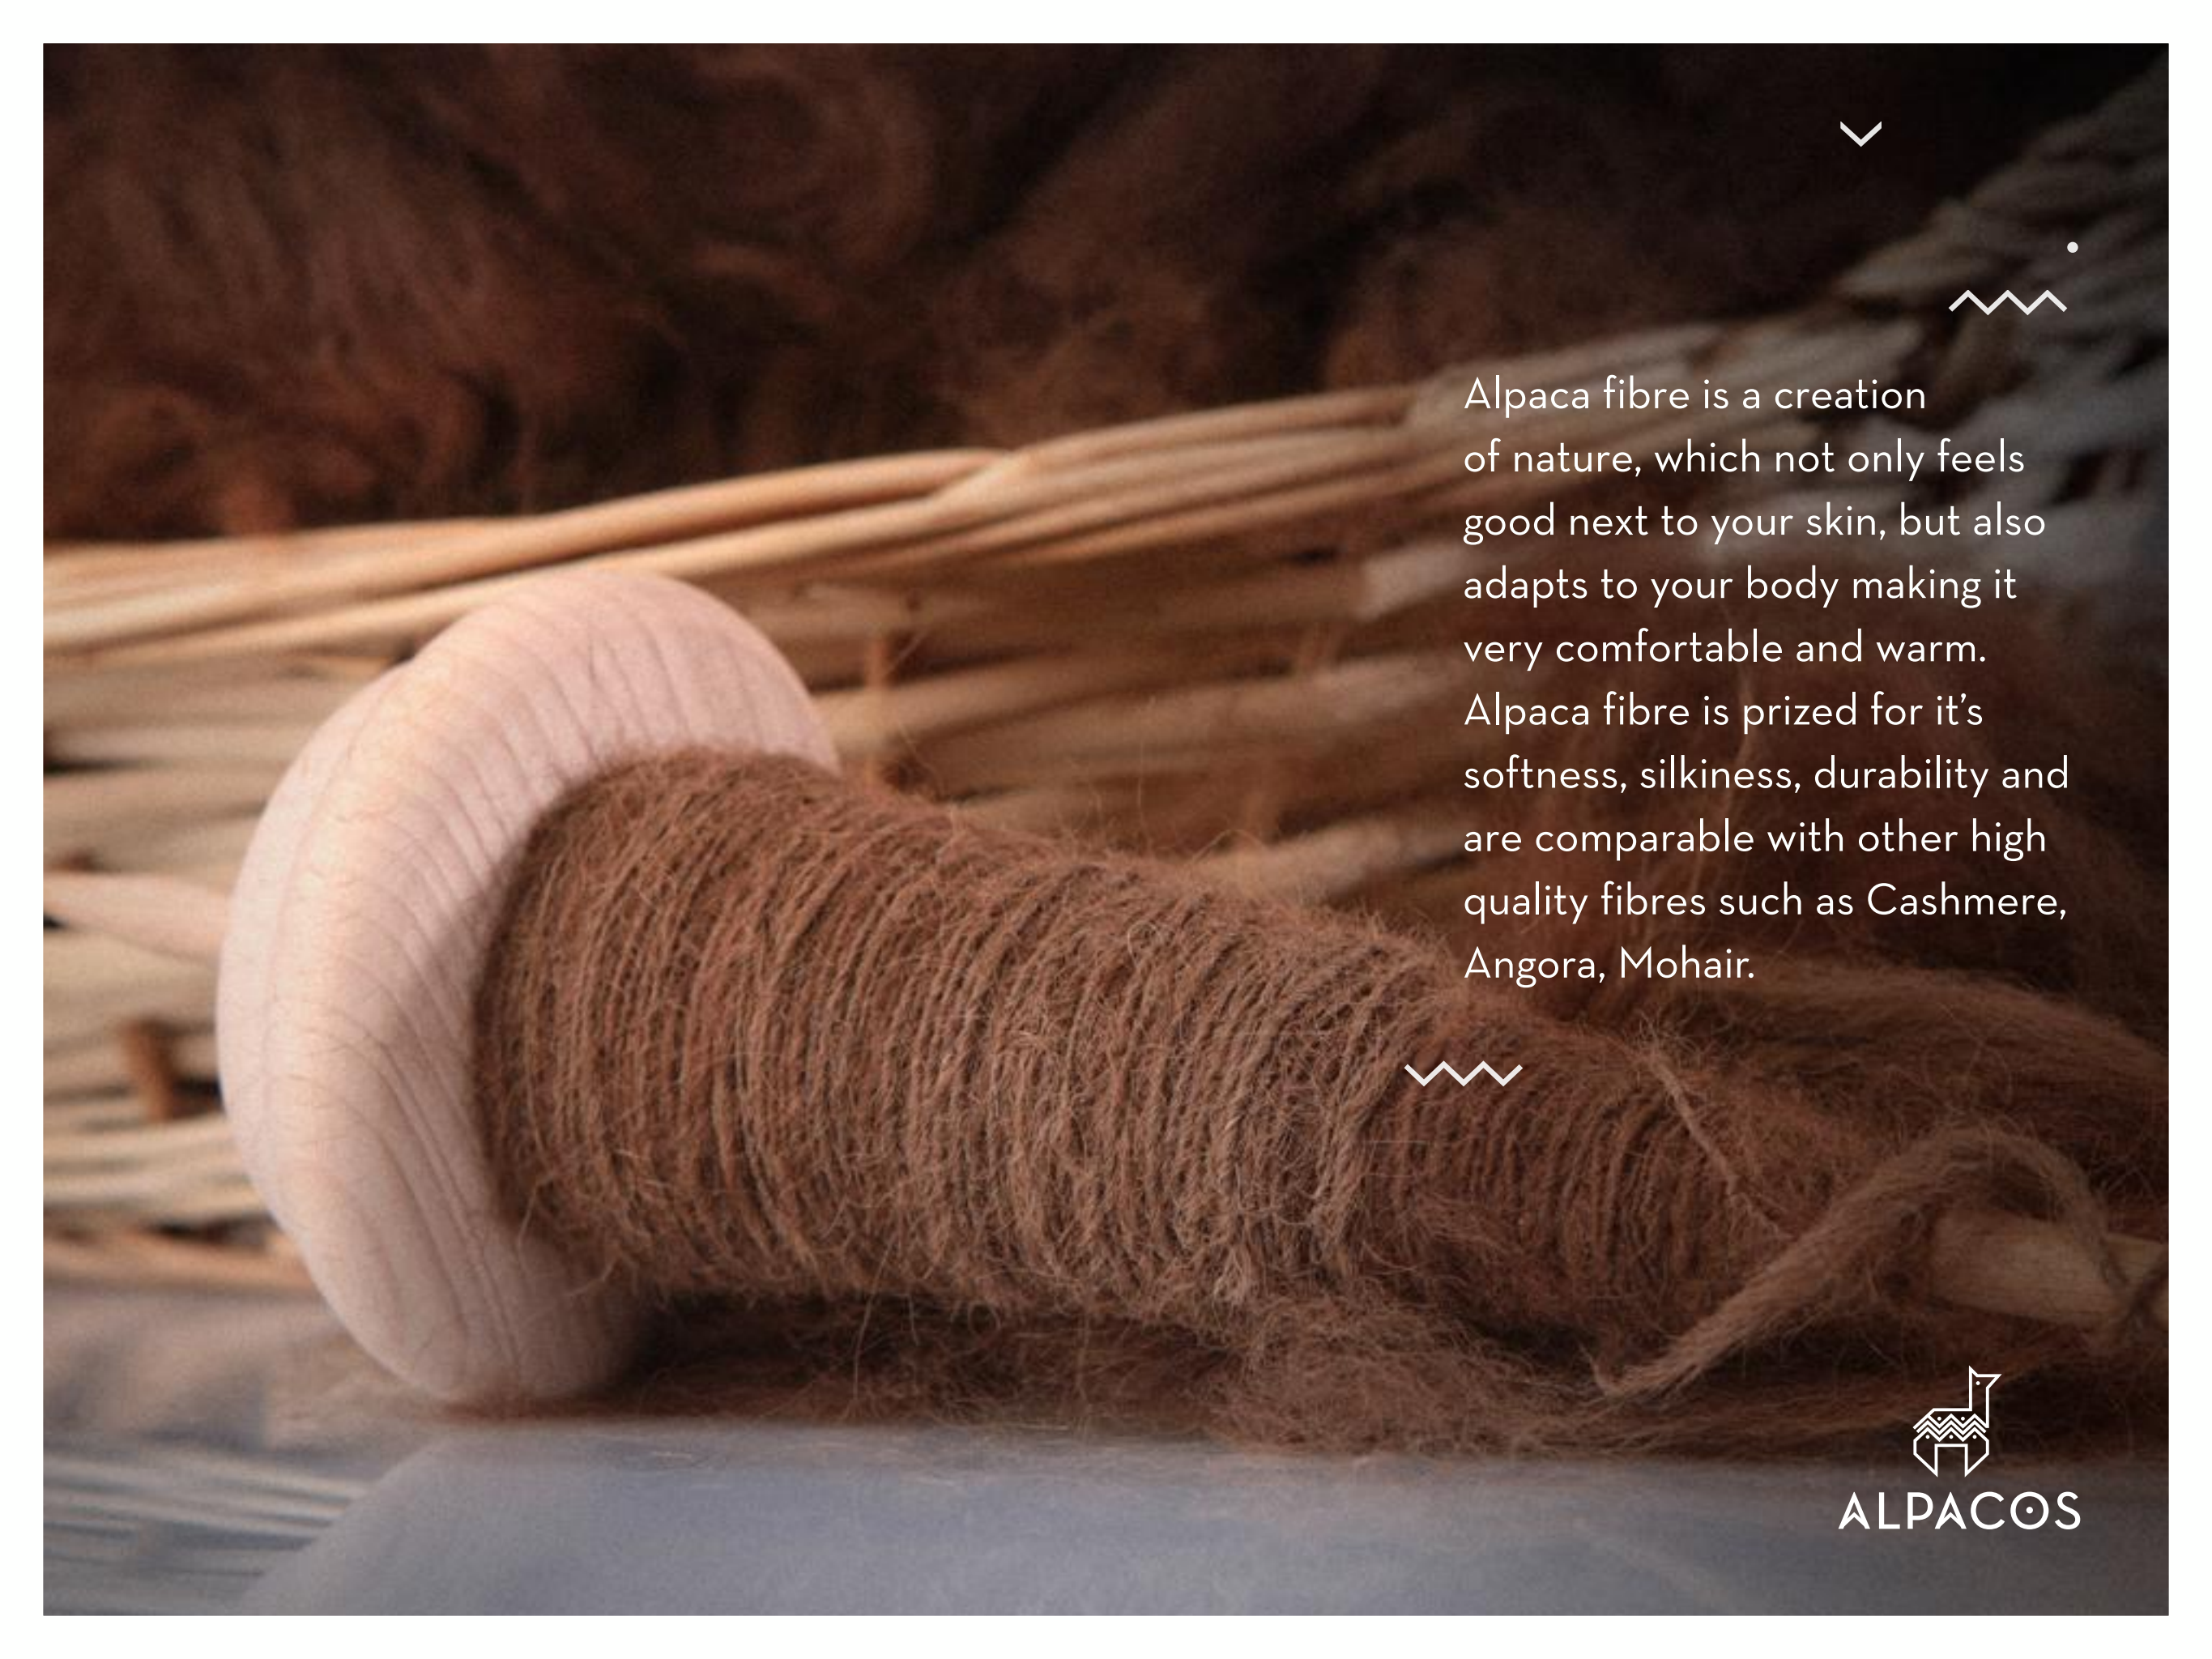

---

Peruvians and Royalty around the world have cherished Alpaca fleece for millennia – earning it the name ‘Gold of the Andes’.

ALPACOS

Alpaca fibre is a creation of nature, which not only feels good next to your skin, but also adapts to your body making it very comfortable and warm. Alpaca fibre is prized for its softness, silkiness, durability and are comparable with other high quality fibres such as Cashmere, Angora, Mohair.

ALPACA FIBRE IS...

- warmer than goose down;
- softer than cotton;
- hypoallergenic;
- stronger than mohair;
- lighter, warmer and stronger than wool;
- finer than cashmere;
- more breathable than thermal knits;
- does not pill or ball.

ALPACOS

FOLLOW SIMPLE RULES

A woman with dark hair, wearing a red and white patterned traditional Andean garment, is smiling and holding two alpacas. One alpaca is white and the other is grey. They are in a high-altitude mountainous landscape with snow-capped peaks under a blue sky with some clouds. The scene is brightly lit, suggesting daytime.
