ABOUT TORIBIO

Toribio is a Costa Rican brand created in March 2014 by Óscar Hernández, agricultural-environmental engineer immersed in the world of design.

Influenced by his upbringing in a rural environment, he accentuates tradition, beauty, and sustainable and native elements in his unique creations through the brand that carries the name of his father, whom he honors for his legacy in leather work.

More than just a brand, Toribio, was founded based on the designer's passion for leather work and to support the people of his community in order to improve their lives through a sustainable business model that encompasses three pillars: environmental sustainability, economic sustainability, and social responsibility.

Through this business model, Toribio has created a space where collaborators are given the opportunity to grow and develop new skills, making them aware of the impact their efforts have on the environment.

The brand's creative process involves unlimited time dedicated to research and development (R & D), with the aim of using only sustainable materials and production processes that guarantee coherence with the values of social responsibility and environmental sustainability which are at the heart of the brand.

ABOUT US

Óscar Hernández, Toribio's Creative Director majored as an Agriculture Engineer at EARTH University with a Masters on Sustainable Management.

After working 20 years on on the agriculture field and sustainable fuel research, he jumped in to the sustainable fashion design industry; with his brand Toribio.

Continuing this journey, he studied abroad attending London College of Fashion in order to achieve his vision with the brand, learning more about its global industry.

Donato Morales, Donato's Creative Director, with a specialization in the Technical Institute of Fashion Mexico, more than 14 years of experience in the fashion industry, for 10 years his brand has dedicated itself to work with the latest techniques to reinforce its products, such as the Luneville embroidery technique.

Ancient French technique used by big fashion houses like Chanel and Dior. Applied to the brand's very own bridal and party dresses.

Allowing the brand to create and reduce the consumption of excess material, eliminating cuts already applied to each piece, creating uniqueness in every design.
