- The State of Paraná is one of the 27 federative units of Brazil and it is located in the Southern Region of Brazil, neighboring the States of Santa Catarina, São Paulo, Mato Grosso do Sul and the countries of Argentina and Paraguay.
- Its area is 199.307.922 km², slightly smaller than Romania, and figures as the 5th richest State in Brazil.
- Its capital is the city of Curitiba.

- Paraná has a subtropical humid climate, with a thermal amplitude that varies from below zero degrees in the winter, up to 40 degrees in the summer.
- The predominant species in the vegetation is Araucaria angustifolia. The branches of this tree appear on the flag and the coat of arms, symbols adopted in 1947. Currently, this ecosystem is very destroyed due to the human activity.

- This region is characterized by its diverse population, results of a series of miscegenation between Portuguese and Spaniards settlers, native Indians and African slaves along with the second migratory wave occurred by Germans, Italians, Poles, Japanese, Ukrainian, Romanian, Austrian, Hungarian, Slav, English, Spaniards, Syrians, Lebanese, Chinese and Swiss. Nowadays, it is also possible to encounter fellow Argentinians, Paraguayans, Bolivians and Haitians living here.
